Application Deadline: International Students - 31st July 2013, UK/EU Students - 30th August 2013

Additional information:

There are 3 potential exit points from the course, certificate, diploma and masters. Assuming satisfactory performance, it is possible to change between these so that, for example, a student who initially registers for the certificate may opt to continue studying to the diploma or masters qualification. Likewise, a student originally registered for the masters may be transferred to the certificate or diploma stream.

Full-time LLM and PgDip students are required to complete six modules from those listed – three modules per semester. For those candidates seeking the award of LLM in Internet Law and Policy, a 15,000 word dissertation on a topic of your own choice is required. Distance learning students are also required to complete six modules, taking two modules in semester one and one module in semester two. A flexible three-module Postgraduate Certificate (PgCert) is also available.

Teaching takes place over two ten week semesters. Semester one runs from October - December and semester two from January - May. Course assignments are submitted during January and May. The period from June to September, especially in year two, is utilised for preparation of the dissertation.
